stand the debt. It certainly couldn't pay cash even for the $17,000 asked for on account. But why pay anything? Is it because the Mrs.
Bishop estate's trustees invested their surplus revenue in government bonds to save the finance department from bankruptcy in former days, that now the people must dig up their hard earned—and hard paid—taxes to reimburse them? Get along! Mr. Minister—the steal is too barefaced.

The law provides that on certain bonds (and it has done so since Kameameha Fifth's time), that they shall bear 12 percent interest. These bonds are wholly in the hands of the Board of Education. The heavy rate of interest was made to compensate the educational facilities of the country for having given up the control of certain lands to the planting interests at that time. They were supposed to be perpetual—nay, everlasting—bonds. But the Minister of Finance hasn't even paid the interest on them since March 31, 1894, and now wishes to extinguish them by giving the Bishop estate's white elephant on Emma street in exchange for this claim on the general government. Go ahead!
Rob the poor children of this and every future generation and say it was only a land deal.

ED. THE INDEPENDENT:—

To differ in politics is a right; to slander, wound and vilify no man's right. "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." My father was not a politician in any smallest sense of that term, nor do I inherit any proclivities or tastes in that direction.
He was, nevertheless, one of the electors from Massachusetts when William H. Harrison was chosen President. When on his dying bed, and past four-score, read to him the latest presidential message, for love of country was yet a warm fire in his heart. When I demurred that so much magnificence should be heaped upon one man (Grant) as he journeyed from kingdom to empire he quickly said: "It is your country, my dear, they are seeking to honor, through its chosen representative." And so, to calumniate the ruler of a country, is to insult every citizen of that country, for he is "the people's choice," and every man is in honor bound to resent the injury as a personal matter. In my country women are not allowed to vote, but in this enlightened age they are just beginning to talk, putting in an entering wedge so to speak; for "man, proud man! dress in a little brief authority," has had "the floor" from the creation up to date. But the clouds are breaking and light is appearing!
Ecoutez moi! We wish that a petition shall be started to-day for farther delay, and we are led to believe that every woman in this Christian land who presumes to take upon her lips the name of our merciful Lord and to repeat his prayer at night and morning, shall come joyfully forward and gladly sign her name "that ex-Queen Liliuokalani shall be released and go to her home in Washington Place." The ex-Queen has never harmed me by thought, word, or deed, and if she had she has more than paid the price! Has she ever harmed you, my woman friend? Think of her long dark days! I have heard of men voting twice by cheating in some way, but woe, if they were caught! In this I intend to vote twice, once for my Christian name Anne, and then for my father's name. "All right!" We are not to consult husband or father in a matter of pure conscience like this is, for your conscience is made for yourself, and not for other people. Why do you say, my good woman, that you will not sign—that the ex-Queen is housed in her own palace and quite too good for her? You know that you would not give up the freedom of your little shebeen for all the glory of the Tuileries if "Prisoner" was to be written over your door. Without your name there will be enough to reach from here to Waikiki.
